Reliable and safe in use with low life cycle costs

The success of any waste handling or facility management contract depends on your ability to offer value adding and reliable services to your customers at the best possible quality compared to the investment. The customer's needs vary and the right solution depends on several important factors.

Firstly, it should comply with the individual customer's needs and enable the customer to reach the relevant outcomes. Given the situation, it could result in better internal logistics, time saving procedures, lower collection costs and a satisfied staff. Furthermore, the baler must be reliable, user-friendly and not least safe to use.

It should also be of high quality, offer long life expectancy, low life cycle costs and be easy to integrate with a larger chain of services provided by yourself. Finally it should not present unnecessary expenses that affect your profit margins. This is especially important if it is part of a rental contract, where your customer is invoiced a fixed monthly fee for the equipment.

A supplier of proven quality products enables you to keep cost levels low and profits high. Reliable equipment that is easy to install and manage on-site keeps your work to a minimum. Turn it on and forget about it, while your customers handle their cardboard, plastic, paper and other recyclable materials with ease.
